

ABSTRACT

A method of forming microstructures. An article including a metal atom precursor is disproportionally exposed to electromagnetic radiation in an amount and intensity sufficient to convert some of the precursor to elemental metal. Additional 5     conductive material may then be deposited onto the elemental metal to produce a microstructure.